Having three gender options is a perfectly reasonable request.

Letting people change their legal names on their passports is exceedingly reasonable.

Letting people change their gender markers to match their current gender - which yes, is something that can change, is the only correct thing to do. Ignoring them or vandalizing their documents is not "protecting women," it's being an ornery asshat and it's unprofessional. Let people correct their own documents. Process them. The vast majority of Americans are ok with these people living their lives, and even if they weren't, it is the morally correct thing to do. Let my trans neighbors and friends exist.
