This plan to demand that name and sex recorded in a passport must reflect the information on a person's unaltered birth certificate is narrow-minded and cruel. Many people have changed their names for any number of legitimate reasons, and the clerks who handle birth certificates make mistakes sometimes. Additionally, if someone has been living as a man or woman their entire adult life, it makes no sense to refer to their birth certificate for that information. A passport is a document for identification, not discrimination.
