The restriction of transgender and genderqueer American citizens' ability to change their passport information to their preferred and correct information is incredibly unconstitutional. It is a gross infringement on the American right to freedom of expression. I am appalled that the American government would do such a thing, inhibit its own citizens from expressing their freedoms in a country as free as ours. What does the federal government have against our God-given rights to decide for ourselves? An individual's ability to determine their identity for themselves is nothing the government should interfere in. Everyone should be able to say what is true about themselves.
