My understanding is that the purpose of passports is to verify the identity of travelers. I do not understand how this would aid or streamline that. The language of the EO this appears to be based on claims that it will increase safety for women. I am a woman, and I do not feel any safer based on the gender on someone's passport. So if this will not improve the ability of passports to identify people, and perhaps make it harder because some people won't have an appearance that matches their listed gender, and it doesn't make women materially safer, it seems like an unnecessary change to the way things are done, which isn't harming anyone as is.
