I strongly believe that with proper documentation all Americans should be able and allowed to change their name and sex marker on their US passports. It creates security concerns when Americans are abroad with incorrect documents. Many people change their names for all sorts of reasons and if sex markers continue to be on passports (which is not a global requirement) they should be changeable with documentation for transgender and intersex Americans as well as when errors may have been made by US department of state. If this is not possible, sex markers should be removed from all US passports as they are both not necessary and create inefficiencies as they slow down the entire process of issuing passports.
