

Author Full Name : AnonymousReceived Date : 02/20/2025 11:11 AMComments Received :

- Removing the ability to change gender markers on passports flies in the name of science and is entirely impractical
- when my gender marker didn't match my actual gender it caused difficulty for me getting through the airport. Nearly every time I went I got frisked. It also causes very uncomfortable interactions with TSA Agents
- Sex is not an immutable trait, all major medical organizations and the science community are in majority agreement that trans people are real and they deserve to have their gender affirmed
- When these anti trans EOs started happening it horribly effected the mental health of trans people I know
- This change to policy is entirely based on cruelty with the purpose to make trans people uncomfortable or give us a hard time leaving the country. While we have an administration that seems dead set on making us villains when we are not, we just want vital medicine and respect