I don't agree with the proposed changes to the gender markers. For one thing, there are more than two sexes as evidenced by the many different intersex conditions. Furthermore, what gender one presents as is a very personal thing, and it's only going to cause more confusion if, for instance, a transgender woman shows up in a dress and sporting natural D-cups but with a "male" gender marker. It could also lead to violence, as it requires outing a trans person to strangers who may want to hurt them on the basis of being trans. Finally, the change is in violation of the injunction put on State by the U.S. District Court for the District of Colorado in Zzyym v. Blinken.
