Allow trans and intersex people to file changes to their passports to better identify themselves on their documentation. A married woman is allowed to change her maiden name to her husband's last name on passports. It is no different for a trans person to change their name and sex on paper. To prevent people from using the identifiers that they are already known by on their documents is nonsense. Married women will be denied name changes on passports for the same reasons trans people will be denied. This will cause unnecessary delays at border checkpoints as people of all backgrounds will have to carry an entire filing cabinet around simply to prove their identity. Allow people to update their information to the correct identifiers for easy and safe travel and identification.
