Government identification exists to allow clear and smooth interactions when citizens are conducting business, travelling, marrying or otherwise living their lives as they have the right to do. Needlessly restricting gender/sex to a non-scientific binary interferes with the purpose of a government identification system. It creates friction for some citizens, creates barriers between them and their rights and creates pointless busywork for government employees to the benefit of no one. Trans, intersex and non-binary citizens deserve the same respect and access to their rights as any other citizen.
