Preventing people from correctly filling out their passport paperwork to push an anti-trans agenda is illegal (because it violates several federal laws) and cruel. Requiring people to put identifiers assigned at birth is ridiculous and will cause mass confusion as people will not resemble their current appearance or name if this change takes place. I, as a married woman, have taken my husband's legal last name for all my documentation. Should I begin to fill out paperwork under my maiden name under these rules? No! Neither should trans or intersex people be expected to use data that no longer applies to them.
