Despite the associated EO citing the change from "gender" to "sex" as a governmentally enforced binary as being done in service of protecting women, there is no evidence it does anything of the sort. Instead, many of the policy's architects have clearly stated a desire to remove transgender people from society. Whatever intentions are publicly stated, the impact of this change would be the disenfranchisement and increased risk of harm to the already marginalized transgender community.

In short, this change is part of a coordinated attack on the most vulnerable among us, and should not be allowed to take place. Scientific consensus is not decided by executive decree, and has never supported the conclusions drawn therein.
