Requiring sex at birth is at odds with being able to identify persons based on their passports and papers. If someone looks a certain way, identifies that way, presents that way, and has legal documentation which states they are a certain way... why on earth would you make it so that whoever else has to review or see that passport gets information which makes it harder to determine who this person is? It would cause a spike in problems not just in border control and customs, but every single agency and private entity who relies on passports being representative of the person they are used to identify.
