An individuals sex assigned at birth has zero to do with their ability to travel legally and is not something border patrol or other agents can or should be confirming on a persons travel into or out of countries. This is also going to cost the taxpayers money to change something that has always existed. Trans people exist. Intersex people exist. Nonbinary people exist. If we cared about security and identity confirmation, we would want identification that confirms this, not something weaponized to shame and embarrass US citizens.
