There is no basis for the X gender marker to be removed legally, constitutionally, morally, or scientifically. Intersex people exist whether you want them to or not, it's just a fact. Also if a US citizen has legally had all their documentation updated to reflect the gender they are living in the US government should acknowledge it on their passport. We all know what happened last time a dictator tried to prevent a marginalized group of people from leaving a country. Gas chambers happened. So I implore whoever reads this comment to have mercy and empathy for a group of people who maybe you don't quite understand, but are also just trying to live their lives the best that they can. We are all human.
