Getting a passport and fixing information should be way easier and more than efficient. My roommate has been trying to apply for one for 3 months, but it's been denied because her signature doesn't match her driver's license because she has carpal tunnel now, and the passport office sent back a photo to her of a completely different woman that looks nothing like her.

Not related, but updating passports to reflect how you present as gender and legally changed names should be easier because if someone has had a complete sex change, it's more confusing if their documentation doesn't match that. The government shouldn't be able to say what people can't and can look like. Doing so is government overreach and impeding on personal freedoms.
