I am writing to express my strong opposition to the proposed passport rule change, which would negatively impact transgender individuals seeking accurate and affirming identification. This rule is not only unnecessary but also harmful, as it creates additional barriers for trans individuals to obtain valid documents that reflect their identity.

Passports serve as critical identification for travel, employment, and daily life. Restricting access to accurate gender markers infringes upon the rights and dignity of transgender individuals. Furthermore, this policy raises constitutional concerns regarding equal protection under the law. Courts have consistently ruled in favor of trans-inclusive policies, recognizing that restrictive identification laws disproportionately harm transgender people and serve no legitimate government interest.

This change would also put trans people at greater risk of discrimination, harassment, and violence. Forcing individuals to carry incorrect identification can lead to dangerous confrontations, denial of services, and violations of their fundamental rights. The government should be ensuring the safety and well-being of all its citizens—not implementing policies that actively harm marginalized communities.

I urge you to reject this rule change and instead support policies that uphold the dignity, privacy, and legal rights of all individuals, regardless of gender identity.
