People getting passports need to be able to apply for the passport and receive their passport with their name and gender as it is most accurate to them as individuals. We should not be trying to remove gender marker or name options. Removing these could cause waste in this system, and also make it so individuals are less identifiable by their passport which would be counterintuitive. As for the ideas of gender/sex markers being limited to only two options, U.S. District Court for the District of Colorado in the Zzyym v. Blinken case seems to have already settled this matter. Everyone who has a passport should be able to successfully renew it with the markers and names that work best as their personal identification.
