I am very concerned about the change to no longer update gender on the passports of trans people to be their current gender. I am a cis person, but I think it's unnecessarily confusing to ask people to identify someone using a gender that the person is not identifying as. I am also a notary public who has used passports to identify people so I may notarize this person's signature, and I feel that this new rule will cause difficulties in this regard. Trans people have always existed and will continue to exist, there is no need to make our world more complicated for everyone by forcing people to hold identification that does not match their gender identity.
