Any changes to passport application should be made with consideration that trans people, and non-gender conforming people do exist. It has been scientifically proven that gender is not just male/female, and therefore the process of registering for official documentation should be updated to correctly reflect that. If we are supposed to be such a great nation, then we should only strive for the best and most inclusive policies to govern how people are able to present themselves, and how those same people can travel. That excellence should be based off of actual empirically proven facts and logic, not the prejudiced and bigoted opinions of insecure rich people who are only in power to make themselves feel important. A passport is one of the most important identification documents that a person can hold. Disallowing someone to have a passport that properly reflects their true gender, is not only petty and selfish, but can also be dangerous to normal people who are trying to travel for normal reasons if there any mistakes made in their other forms of identification.
