Limiting sex marker options raises unnecessary barriers when completing this form, and causes harm in the form of undue stress to those with a non-standard gender, such as intersex people, or to those with a standard sex but who do not conform to the standard visual presentation of their sex, such as a 'tomboy' woman. Acknowledging the reality of EO 14168, a change must be made, but rather than limiting the gender marker to M or F, the marker should instead be removed entirely. This would avoid all unnecessary confusion and sources of stress when it comes to a passport.
