The changes to the Passport Application form doesn't hold any benefit for people, other than working against Intersex people who scientifically cannot identify fully with being wholly Male or Female, as well as people who may identify with a gender identity different to their birth sex (including non-binary & trans persons). By requiring this change in the correction process, you are limiting people to 2 identities - Male or Female, with no change. Since the only purpose of a passport is to correctly identify people, it should be more important to be aligned with specifically the "gender" identity of the person, and not their "sex" which can be different and create more confusion, especially if the outward appearance of said person is different than the perceived stereotypical presentation of their sex. Trans, Non-Binary, or even Intersex who have previously gotten any transformative procedures may be further harassed, and the confusion will only further slow down the process of identification. In the end, this will be a hinderance to the purpose of a passport, and will create more issues while solving none.
