

Author Full Name : AnonymousReceived Date : 02/20/2025 11:30 PMComments Received :

I find that the proposed changes to marking gender particularly in passports to be harmful to transgender and intersex americans. Such a change is restricting these people's freedom to travel. Making such a change either forces them to endure the emotional turmoil and indecency of being identified as something they are not by the law and their own homeland, a basic human right and need that many take for granted. Or else they are confined to american borders.

Furthermore, enacting such a change is a waste of government money and time, something this administration claims to be trying to fight. No harm is being done, no fraud is committed, no illegal activity is made by letting people live and identify as they wish. Enacting this change benefits no one but hurts many.