

Author Full Name : AnonymousReceived Date : 02/21/2025 03:42 AMComments Received :

Passports for trans-identifying people should indicate their biological SEX. Those whose appearances deviate from their biological SEX in ways that would cause confusion at security checkpoints, delaying other passengers, should have an indication of this in their passports. One possible solution, instead of using their correct marker with an annotation (such as 'F' natal plus 'T' for transgender, e.g. F/t), might be to list FTM or MTF instead of their biological SEX alone. They should have to pay extra for any added paperwork. The burden of their identity should not fall on the state, government, or the tax payer. Or on fellow travellers.

There is no such thing as non-binary and passports should never list X alone. Accurate reporting of sex assists security and helps control borders.