Restricting the ability to change gender markers makes no sense. Many people have taken hormones which kill sex drive, cause mass waves of depression, had surgery, and are publicly ridiculed, only to find the government is now making their lives so much harder. There are only two logical conclusions to come to:

1. The change is made with a massive lack of knowledge of how this will effect trans people and is deeply flawed in judgement, or

2. It is intentional. They don't want trans people to be able to flee the country without difficulty or complete obstruction because the government has plans for how to weaponize their existence, and eventually eliminate them.

The holocaust didn't only kill 5 million Jewish people, it killed millions of "undesirables" including the disabled, and the gay and trans communities of Germany. Literally one of the first things the nazis did was destroy a library dedicated to research of Gay and Transgender people. Now maybe the republican party isn't planning to go that far, you say, but even if not, it certainly isn't a good look. Gender Markers and papers are the first step. Remember that.
