I would strongly discourage the government from instituting this policy as it needlessly excludes and creates issues for transgender, non-binary, and intersex people. This will make it more difficult for us (I myself am non-binary) to travel since what is on our documents will no longer accurately reflect how we identify and present, leading to issues going through customs either going abroad or returning home, as well as potential issues when dealing with medical emergencies or other things that may come up while abroad. Regardless of any policy, transgender, non-binary, and intersex people will exist and it would make sense to make sure we have documents that accurately reflect our identities which is good for us but it's also good for the government to have a good idea of everyone's demographic info for all sorts of purposes and ensure things are running smoothly and efficiently.
