Frankly my case against this is simple. I don't want my taxes used to police other American's bodies. I fail to see how adding more bureaucracy by requiring proof of sex benefits me in any way. As it stands the process of getting a passport is long and arduous, that's without additional steps. Factor in the additional costs on TSA and Law Enforcement as they have to identify people who present as Males with a Female passport or Vice Versa.

Beyond an infringement on the right to self expression so many Americans value deeply, this is a sickening waste of government resources to combat a non-issue. While I was born Male and have always identified as such, I still recognize that the gender identities of others has no impact on my material life. It does not harm the economy, it does not reduce crime. There are far more pressing issues than the personal choices of a small minority. As such this program is deeply wasteful.

In summary I believe the United States government should continue to allow self determination regarding gender listings on passports, allowing for M, F, or X options, without proof of assigned gender at birth, as they currently do.

I sincerely hope you'll consider my input on this matter.
