The changes to passport forms related to gender ideology have a strong potential to be harmful to individuals who do not present gender in ways that are typically expected - for example a feminine man. This doesn't just harm transgender people, it also harms anyone who doesn't meet a specific gender expectation and causes further issues in actual passport use by slowing travel and customs lines, and delaying passport access which is already a long and arduous process. Consider - who does it truly harm to get passports to trans people? An ego? A social comfort? We are a diverse country! We often are not alike. Why is this current issue so different?
