My partner renewed her passport and it came back marked with a 'M'. It's true she had passport marked M as a child. She got that fixed as a teenager. Fifteen years later... we now have a person with a vagina, breasts, 38" hips 27" waist with an ID that obviously doesn't reflect reality.

You really need to be able to correct things like this regardless of the current presidential understanding of and crusade against intersex and trans people. It's probably better for an ID to reflect physically observable attributes rather than some idea of infallible documents, which are apparently only infallible when it comes to sex (and never mind the other documents that disagree).
