The current passport policy barring name and gender updates is a blatant violation of personal autonomy and human rights. It forces individuals to carry incorrect documentation, exposing them to discrimination, harassment, and travel barriers, while serving no legitimate purpose.

Passports are essential for daily life, yet this policy arbitrarily restricts people from aligning their identity with legal documents. Many jurisdictions allow updates to IDs, yet the new passports policy ignores this, needlessly complicating lives.

This policy disproportionately harms transgender and nonbinary individuals, subjecting them to invasive scrutiny and legitimizing discrimination. It contradicts self-determination and privacy rights, prioritizing control over dignity.

The refusal to modernize is a deliberate choice, one that upholds systemic exclusion. Other nations have updated policies without issue. It is imperative to reverse this unjust restriction immediately and grant all individuals the recognition they deserve.
