This new passport rule is non-sensical and creates security concerns in addition to making life harder for trans people for no reason. If I was missing or police were looking for me for some reason and made a public announcement based on a male gender designation on my passport or other identity documents, no one would be able to identify me because people perceive me as female based on my outward appearance. It will also cause problems while traveling or voting because people will think my documents don't align with my outward appearance. I fail to see what utility is served by reverting or not allowing gender marker changes.
