I work in higher education as an academic advisor for college students, many of whom are immigrants who have recently become US citizens; others are the children of immigrants. When these students travel overseas, they are often going to places where it would be dangerous for them if their gender presentation does not match the sex indicated on their passport; in some cases, such as Malaysia, that can even cause them to be charged with a crime (https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/LGBTQ_rights_in_Malaysia). Continuing to allow people to select the sex they identify with for their passport is necessary for the safety of these United States citizens when traveling abroad.
