I am writing to express my displeasure in the recent measures that disallow people changing their gender markers on their passports to reflect their lived gender. Not infrequently, the gender an individual is assigned at birth is found to be incorrect later in life and these individuals have just as much a right as anyone to have documentation that reflects them correctly. People change their names on government documents all the time due to marriage, divorce, or simply not liking their name so it is ridiculous to me that there is such a fuss about changing a gender marker.

In no uncertain terms I stand with the transgender citizens of the United States pursuing their right to be able to update their gender marker on their passports.
