The changes to passports requiring disclosure of biological sex at birth are completely unnecessary and a waste of taxpayer time and money. Identification such as a passport needs to contain information about a person that can be used to IDENTIFY them. There is no way of identifying someone's biological sex by looking at them. There is no reason to have sex or gender on a passport at all. If it must be there, why does the government have any stake in what people call themselves? Just because you are afraid of something different than what you are used to does not mean that you have to make it illegal. Just be nice. And if you can't be nice, just fuck off.
