First, people of genders other than male and female DO exist. Second, if a person's legal documents, including a previous passport, reflect a certain gender, that gender should continue to be reflected, and not be changed due to the whim of an administration. Legal documents should be consistent and reflect the same information, this change will force certain individuals to have inaccurate identification due to bad policy, not due to any fault of their own. Also, this will be a waste of State Department time, as it will go to court.
