The Gender marker on one's passport is a useful tool for helping to identify a person. Changing it from "Gender" to "Sex" only serves to both make the passport process more difficult for transgender people, while also making passports less useful for helping confirm the identify of a group of people who very often no longer look like the biological sex they were born with. This change is not only discriminatory in nature but will also make it harder to identify transgender people with their passport.
