Individuals deserve the ability to change their passport information to better fit their presentation. If individuals are allowed to change their photo, why not their gender? Do we look the same as we once did ten, twenty years ago? I believe it is a major problem to determine humans based on sex characteristics presented at birth rather than how they are perceived in the current day. Changing one's gender marker is already a laborious task with many checks to make sure it is done without ill intent. Now, many individuals are left with mismatched identification due to the lack of recognition that gender markers can and should be able to be changed.
