If yall make it so that trans individuals have to identify as their birth gender then what happens when their photo doesn't match their gender? Like if a trans woman has to identify as a man on her passport but looks like a woman doesn't that make passport fraud easier to commit? Anyone trying to get in to the country can put any gender on their passport now and claim to be trans, and then just say they had to identify that way because the government told them they had to. What then? Isn't it safer to make trans people identify with the way they look?
