

Author Full Name : Stephen Voght

Received Date : 02/24/2025 12:26 PM

Comments Received :

The purpose of a passport is to positively identify an individual when crossing an international border. The identification should be as straightforward as possible by describing who they currently are, not by providing data from birth which might no longer be relevant. Requiring gender assigned at birth to be reported on passports is discriminatory, in violation of existing law and judicial decisions, and contrary to the goal of clear, positive identification and safety of Americans while traveling.