Why should a passport application for a trans person be rejected or destroyed? If they have followed all the legal processes in pursuit of their transition, just as you would for a name change, why should that be denied? The gender marker is there to confirm someone's identity, and it creates confusion, extra work, and even puts the US citizen traveler in danger to have their gender politicized. Trans people that have committed no crime deserve to be able to travel to and from the country.
