I object to the collection of applicants' "biological sex at birth" as part of this update. U.S. citizens who are transgender or intersex currently have the right to have their gender marker on their passport marked as X or updated to reflect their gender. Requiring gender markers to match biological sex at birth will make this process difficult for the 1.7% of people who are born intersex. It will also create an undue burden on transgender Americans, who will face additional discrimination, scrutiny, and danger as a result. Denying Americans access to legal identification is unconstitutional and a gross overreach of power by the President's office. I support trans-inclusive legislation and am opposed to rolling back the civil liberties of thousands of Americans on a whim.
