I would like to strongly object to the plans to alter passport forms and processing procedures to replace gender with sex, as well as current policy which reverses prior gender marker changes on renewals of existing passport books. This policy change puts gender-nonconforming people, trans people and intersex people at risk when crossing borders both in the US and outside of it. I know that erasing trans people and gender variance in general is a stated aim of this regime, but how is any of this consistent with the putatively conservative aims of personal liberty and small government?

In short, I know you're going to do this anyways and that you don't care what I comment. Follow your own religious doctrine: "Judge not, that ye be not judged"
