As a natural born citizen of the US, I am a believer in individual freedom and the importance of leaving government out of personal decisions. Preventing people from having their passports reflect the reality of their physical body is an affront to individual freedom. Whether a person is intersex, transgender, or cisgender their passport should reflect who they are, not what the government wishes for them to be. This is why I am opposed to the change preventing people from updating their passport gender marker, and ask that this policy be rolled back.
