It concerns me to no end, the dangerous game being played with transgender citizens' identification. Trans people seeking name or gender marker changes are being denied access to the papers sent in to verify requested changes as well as the passports being sent for updates. Besides being based on outdated and disproven theories on gender identity (there being only two is simply not the case), the strict policing on trans identities being reflected in official paperwork is a waste of the federal government's time and money. There is no reason to deny someone their identity when they have already gone through so many hoops to claim it.
