The idea of a binary biological sex at birth is scientifically false. Humans are born with a variety of chromosomes, beyond XX or XY. Therefore, trying to collect documents for someone's biological sex at birth is frankly a waste of time for the states and government, and would lead to increased bureaucratic waste. What if someone was designated as "female" on their original birth certificate, but for all intents and purposes looks like a "male", especially with a full beard? It would frankly be confusing for the purposes of identification, and would therefore waste the time of immigration officers welcoming Americans back into the country. America is the land of change and freedom. We should stick to that idea, instead of trying to enforce a, frankly, transphobic agenda.
