I oppose the change of passport documents to use the word "sex," and instead support and urge maintaining the marker "gender" to adequately reflect the information provided by applicants to receive passports.

Passport documents are a reflection of primarily adult identification, and not an attestation to biology. They are meant to be true representation of the people carrying them, and this is why they expire regularly and require photographs and approval. Changing them to use words that imply biology, such as the word "sex," would water down their effectiveness, as well as violate the rights of adults to identify themselves.
