I'm opposed to the change from 'gender' to 'sex' and urge the continuation of the current policy, where gender markers reflect the information provided by the applicant.

Unless and until it is made abundantly clear that knowing what someone's genitalia is - instead of just matching a photo in a passport to the person presenting said passport - will dramatically improve the safety of all citizens, I remain opposed to this change.

Without overwhelming proof that doing so is a threat to democracy and American citizens, to refuse someone the ability to identify themselves as they see fit is tantamount to denying them the right to liberty as guaranteed in the Constitution.
