This change to the passport application process for only certain Americans (transgender Americans or anyone who has been issued a passport with a different sex in the past) is unconstitutional. The federal government should treat all employees equally according to the principles of the United States. Additionally, the time it takes for state department employees to determine previous birth certificate information and perform an "investigation" provides no concrete benefit to issuing passports correctly. The extra time and money this procedure would take is not justified for such a minor benefit. Also, it is categorically impossible for citizens to comply with an executive order that makes no biological sense - there is no biological sex "At conception", so this entire policy is an unscientific waste of time
