This would be a needlessly complicated and drawn out process of overhauling our existing standards for US passports. For what benefit compared to how is it going to impact or impede citizens who currently hold passports from renewing/holding one going forward? This kind of barrier to legal citizens who wish to travel and safely return here is deeply concerning along with the hyperfocus about a small minority population. It is an overreacting response to a smaller issue that could be handled with a more measured and prepared response.
