Forcing people who have transitioned to a sex other than their assigned sex at birth to list their assigned sex at birth as their sex on their passports has no purpose other than wanton state-sanctioned cruelty toward the trans community. It will have the effects of making travel more difficult for them, limiting their ability to travel freely, and endangering their lives. The United States of America should be a beacon for freedom and egalitarianism for the world. Implementing this policy would not only put American citizens in danger, it would embolden violent discrimination against the LGBT community worldwide.
