The best way to uphold Biological Truth would be not to force American citizens to live as a different gender than the one that exists in their identity, which is determined genetically, and therefore biologically. If an American citizen suffers the horrifying situation of being born, by chance, with a physical body that differs from their genetic identity, they should be allowed to have their true identity reflected on their passport, and other official identity-related documents. Forcing American citizens to live their lives a certain way, and denying them the freedom to live their lives how they feel they must, is, if I remember correctly, not what we do here in the United States.
